Who of us have never heard the call of the sea and dreamed to prowl the oceans!

Naturally, there exist some other pretty good calls. For instance, a call to treasure hunt...

...catching
birds,

...growing pets

...high-fashion,

...or, sometimes difficult to understand what sort of call.

However the call of the sea is much louder.

Good news, there are a lot of ways to satisfy this call.

The easiest way is canoe.

*Of course,
you can enlarge
the vessel,*

...but you should be ready for the new passengers which will try to cling for the new free seats.

*However if you do not worry about new passengers,
you can take a larger vessel,*

*Or even much larger.
But in this case you'll need to think about a crew. And here some friendly recommendations.*

Firstly, all candidates need to pass the IQ-test. But if you don't have such a sophisticated and expensive equipment...

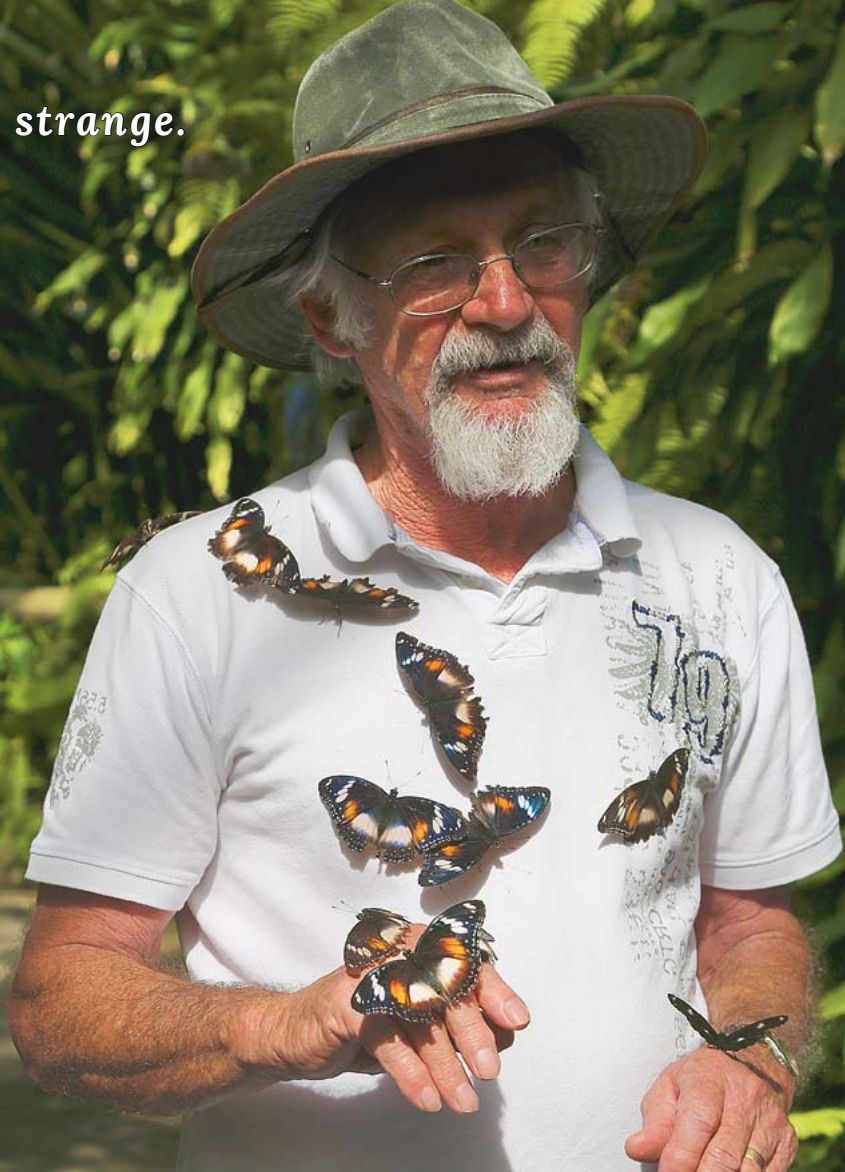

...at least don't pick too active person...

...too passive,

...and strange.

*Better rely on good,
old sea fans – surfers, for example,*

...or divers. They always look very safe and secure.

Besides, you'll need to read something about shallows,

...about high and low tides.

*After that you will need to learn how to fight
with pirates,*

...and kick
out annoying whales from the boat.

*The last step is the easiest one.
You need to learn navigation in detail...*

...and choose the cheapest place in marina to save money for fuel.

After that you need to kiss your wife according to old traditions...

...and start boating!

May be it makes sense to take one more glance at the canoe before start?

Because the sea gives equal love to all who comes to its call, regardless their boat size.
