Weirdos, dreamers always live with us on this earth.

Our world strives for rationality and pragmatism.

However, despite all its efforts, there have always been...

...and will be people on earth for whom all this is not important.

They're interested in something completely different.

We often look down on them and smile when we see them because their interests seem a bit funny or weird to us.

However, are we really sure that they're weirdos...

...but not us?

If we're sure, then let's try to answer the question: what is the cost of one smile?

Well, or what is the price of one thought...

...for example, about the meaning of life?

And, about love... how can we measure it...

... or what does the material equivalent of love look like?

Do we have undeniable
answers to these questions?

Maybe there is nothing more or less significant in these concepts,

...but all these things are equally important for a person, perhaps the only difference lies just in their shades?

And, sometimes every "color" is very important to each of us.

In everyday life, different weirdos, dreamers, storytellers open gates for us...

*... to a new world, very interesting and unusual.
Then, suddenly, it turns out that we've always lived beside it but had never seen it before.*

Their unusual views, stories, books...

*... gives people
fairytale
for hundreds of years. If there wasn't any of this on earth,*

... who knows what world we would have today?

Of course, we shouldn't be afraid of new things coming into our lives.

Beautiful is better than ugly, cozy is better than uncomfortable - it's silly to argue with that.

However, we should also understand...

...that this is not the only thing people need.

In fact, we need no less, and even more of, for example, love,

...
friendship,

*...creativity
and harmony.*

And, also, sometimes it's good for people to think about all these things...
