Once we...

*...and
our friend,*

...were looking at a crocodile's bad teeth and thought: "Which animal or fish has the most beautiful teeth and smile?"

To figure this out on the land we visited our friend Chucky and payed him in bananas for the all investigation in advance.

*After that, we wanted to make the same offer to our underwater friend Ian.
But, his eyes bulged and he categorically refused to do this work.*

*Then, we had to take this job upon ourselves.
To start, we built
a small submarine,*

...after that, we selected a right course,

...and then set off on our journey.

The first one to meet us was a chatty Trigger. Right away, he started to assure us that he had the most beautiful teeth underwater. We had some doubts about that so continued our journey.

*On our way,
we honestly
tried to take a look in every
mouth...*

*...of all
shapes
and sizes.*

*Sometimes in order to make
the underwater inhabitants
open their mouths, we needed to surprise them...*

*...and sometimes we had to give
them a good shake.*

Sometimes we came across harmless silent creatures which didn't want to open their mouths no matter what.

We honestly tried to examine every mouth on our way starting from the smallest ones...

...and finishing with big,

...and even the biggest.

Still, had we not met an old wise Napoleon, we wouldn't have advanced much in that search. (With quite good teeth, by the way!) He was the one who told us about a cave where, according to him, there was something that we were looking for.

*We headed
there immediately and
soon were
at the place.*

*Indeed, the
incredible
whiteness of
the cave
inhabitant's
teeth blinded
us!*

*And there were
many such
lucky "white-
toothed
creatures".*

However, by taking a closer look, we realized that the curvature of their teeth spoiled it.

My friend and I decided to help them and offered the help of one diver-dentist, that we knew. The reaction of the “white-teethed creatures” wasn’t joyful after all. Perhaps, they had never heard of the famous Hollywood smile? We thought it would be nice to show them a couple of photos...

*After that cave
we unanimously
decided to go back home.*

It was necessary to think everything over in a calm place and draw up some new plans. The world is full of the unknown!

For example, we have always been curious why kangaroos only jump on water near purple houses.

*Or why does the ocean start to foam whenever we don't go under water for a long time. All in all,
we had quite a few questions.*

Another important conclusion that we made was: “Never agree on anything with possums!” When we returned to our “friend” Chucky he looked as if he had seen us for the first time.

*After that, he invited his girlfriend and cheekily started to dine with her in front of us.
Unbelievable rudeness!*
