A photograph of a beach with waves crashing onto the shore under a clear blue sky. The water is a deep blue, and the waves are white with foam. The sky is a clear, light blue. In the distance, there are some buildings and trees on the horizon.

Who among us have never heard the call of the sea and dreamed to prowl the oceans?!

Naturally, there exist some other pretty good calls. For instance, a call to treasure hunt...

...catching
birds,

...raising pets

...creating high-fashion,

...or, sometimes it's difficult to understand what kind of call is.

However the call
of the sea
is much louder.

Good news, there are a lot of ways to satisfy this call.

The easiest way is canoe.

*Of course,
you can enlarge
the vessel,*

...but in this case, you should be prepared for the appearance of new passengers who will try to cling to new empty seats.

However, if you do not mind the company, you can take a larger vessel,

Or even much larger. But in this case, you'll need to consider hiring a crew. And here are some friendly recommendations.

Firstly, make all candidates complete an IQ-test. But if you don't have such sophisticated and expensive equipment...

...at least don't pick hyperactive persons...

...too passive,

...and strange.

*Better trust the good old sea lovers
- surfers, for example,*

...or divers. Safety and security radiate from them.

Then, you'll need to read a little about the shallows,

...about high and low tides.

*After that you will need to learn how to fight
with pirates,*

*...and kick
the annoying
whales away
from the boat..*

*The last step is the easiest.
You need to study navigation in detail...*

...and choose the cheapest place in marina so that some money is left for fuel.

*After that you need to kiss your wife
according to old traditions...*

...and start a voyage!

One last thing. Maybe it still makes sense to take another good look at the canoe, before starting this whole process?

*Because the sea gives equal love
to all who comes to its call,
regardless their boat size.*

*The call
of the Sea*

A serene beach scene with waves crashing onto the shore under a clear blue sky. The water is a deep blue, and the waves are white with foam. The sky is a pale, clear blue. In the distance, a low line of buildings and trees is visible on the horizon.

The sea always calls us.

*For someone this is important,
for someone not.*

to this call is devoted
this funny photo story.*
